MUSICAL ANIMALS.

"It's all perfectly absurd," said the elephant at the circus.

"Think of them giving me an instrument like this 'cello (as it's called) to play," said the second elephant, named Jim.

"Well, look at this fiddle of mine," said the first elephant, named Jamie.

"It does seem pretty funny," said a third elephant named Norton as he looked at the bugle which he was supposed to blow. There were six elephants in the band.

"Do you know when you play what you're playing?" asked Jim.

"I know I'm playing the same tune as you are," said Jamie. "Do you know what that is?"

"I too know I'm playing the same tune as you are, or that I am supposed to," said Jim. "But I am sure I don't know what it is."

"Do you know?" they asked Norton.

"Well," said Norton, "I know we're supposed to play a number of tunes. The thing I am always afraid of is that we may each be playing a different tune at the same time. But I don't suppose we would be, as we have good memories."

"It's a jolly good thing we have, too," said Jim, "for if we hadn't, I am sure I don't know what would happen to the music. It would be pretty funny music."

"That it would," said Jamie. "To be sure, I can remember which tunes we play and how we play them—I mean in what order and which of us plays which instrument. I could never forget the queer instrument I play and the weird sounds that it makes."

"Nor could I," said Norton.

"I think that is the great thing that helps us," said Jamie. "If it weren't for memories, just think what a terrible time we would have. We would simply have the worst time imaginable, getting all mixed up in instruments, tunes and notes and all. As it is, we do pretty well. The clowns dance to our music and the people laugh and they clap and we make bows with our trunks. I don't really think, even considering our fine memories, that we're as great musicians as the performing seals. They play with more spirit and they are fine at all their tricks."

"Yes," continued Jamie. "They play an excellent game of ball, though we can do that, too. But they look so fine and funny and slippery as they play and as their heads wave about."

"They seem so clever because they haven't our trunks or great legs to help them out. Yes, they're a great addition to the circus and as clever as any creatures can be."

"Do you know," said Norton, "I've heard that people at the circus have noticed our serious and solemn expressions?"

"Why do you say serious and solemn when one word will do the trick?" asked Jamie.

"Oh well," said Norton, "it is all right. I have time. I'm not due to go in the ring for quite a little while."

"That's so," agreed Jamie.

"Pray continue what you were about to say and which I so rudely interrupted."

"I was going to say that I had heard that folks had noticed how serious we looked when we were playing, and that they had spoken about it."

"Good," said Jamie. "Then they may think we're great musicians and that we have great elephant souls and that we would be in big city orchestras and perhaps play in operas were it not for the fact that we had promised ourselves to the circus for a good number of years."

"Yes, they may think that, for we mustn't tell them that our great and wonderful memories are the things about us that makes us musicians. We can remember what we're to play and how we're to play it rather than being able to play because we are musical to our finger tips, as the saying goes."

"It would be better in our case to say musical to our trunk tips, I suppose. But we're not that, we're part of the music of the circus and folks listen to us and clap at us, so as that's all they seem to want us for, let us not worry over our shortcomings, musically."

"Doesn't Get Ahead." The girl who always blames someone else for her failures is not the girl who gets ahead.
